
HUMANITY IN CRISIS: REREADING HANS JONAS'S PHILOSOPHICAL ESSAYS IN THE AGE OF CLIMATE CHANGE AND POST-TRUTH POLITICS

International Workshop

22-24th May 2017

Aarhus University Conference Center at Sandbjerg Estate, Denmark

In the introduction to his Philosophical Essays, published in 1974, Hans Jonas remarked that an earlier title considered for this collection was Man in Crisis. Yet this title was discarded “for fear of shrillness.” In our current political and environmental climate, such a fear, if no other, can easily be discarded. While Jonas was writing during the height of the atomic age and the Cold War, he made no secret that he was far less worried about mutually assured destruction, than by the gradual, yet lethal, effect on humankind on their surroundings. To counteract that, he developed a philosophy of organism which based moral truths on scientifically observed phenomena. In our times, in which those who warn us from the dangerous consequences of climate change are facing post-truth politics and rhetorics, a rereading of Jonas's essays seems highly apt. This three-days workshop would thus be devoted to such a reengagement – from our own perspectives – with Jonas's Philosophical Essays. As such, this joint rereading will address the three different yet interconnected areas of his work, which are represented in this collection: Science, Technology, and Ethics; Organism, Mind, and History; and Religious Thought of the First Christian Centuries.

The Workshop is funded by The Danish Council for Independent Research Sapere Aude Fellowship as a part of the project Wrestling with Archons: Gnosticism as a Critical Theory of Culture. The Project is affiliated with the Centre for the Study of Antiquity and Christianity at the School of Culture and Society of Aarhus University
